Preface

The political transition following the August 2024 uprising, which forced Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina from her office after 15 years in power, has seen a disturbing escalation in mob violence in Bangladesh. From August 2024 through July 2025, at least 637 (list attached) people, including 41 Police officers, were lynched in acts of vigilante justice, marking one of the deadliest waves of extrajudicial killings in the country's recent history. By contrast, 51 lynching deaths were recorded in all of 2023, under the previous administration. Mob lynching deaths increased more than 12 times compared to 2023.

At “The Zabeer Jashore Hotel, Jashore, 24 people were burnt to death on 4 August 2024.

Among 637 deaths, 182 people were burnt in Gaji Tyres, Rupganj, Narayanganj on 25 August 2024. Their names and details of the victims were not published.

Because of strong media censorship, we couldn't collect full information on all mob lynching deaths. So this list should be considered incomplete.

This sharp increase underscores a dangerous erosion of law and order during a period of political instability and weakened state control. The fall of a longstanding regime created both a power vacuum and a public crisis of confidence in the country's justice system, which many now perceive as either absent or co-opted by political agendas.

With police forces overstretched, court systems paralyzed, and local leaders either targeted or in hiding, citizens increasingly took justice into their own hands. Public spaces, once protected by law, have become flashpoints for mob killings, often triggered by nothing more than suspicion, rumor, or political resentment.

While many incidents stemmed from accusations of theft or harassment, a large portion of the violence had political or communal undertones. Local human rights organizations have reported that over 70% of lynching victims since August 2024 had ties to the former ruling Bangladesh Awami League or its affiliated student and labor wings.

Other victims have included religious minorities, particularly Hindus and Ahmadiyya Muslims, accused of blasphemy or conspiracy through viral posts on social media—often with little or no evidence. One of the most horrific incidents involved the public lynching of Lal Chand Sohag, a Hindu social worker, outside Mitford Hospital on 9 July 2025. His death was livestreamed across platforms, igniting both national outrage and fear.

In the age of smartphones, rumors travel faster than facts. Social media has been a double-edged sword, used by citizens to expose injustice but also as a tool to amplify panic and hatred. Misinformation and inflammatory content have played key roles in mobilizing mobs within minutes.

In one incident in Chattogram, a Facebook post falsely claiming that a local Hindu man had desecrated the Quran led to a mob attack that left two dead and several homes burned. Despite the post being proven false hours later, the damage was irreversible.

The interim government, led by Nobel Laureate Muhammad Yunus, has vowed to crack down on vigilante violence. Authorities have promised a "zero tolerance" approach, and launched nationwide campaigns promoting legal awareness and community policing. However, prosecution remains rare, with only a handful of arrests about mob killings, and fewer still leading to convictions.

Critics argue that the government has prioritized political consolidation over the rule of law, focusing more on purging remnants of the former regime than restoring judicial order. Meanwhile, public trust in institutions continues to plummet, fueling the very violence the state seeks to prevent.

Beyond the numbers, the rise in mob violence has left deep psychological scars on communities across Bangladesh. Fear has become a daily companion in many neighborhoods. Parents are hesitant to let children walk alone, and shopkeepers speak in hushed tones when discussing political topics.

A recent survey by the South Asian Network on Economic Modeling (SANEM) found that 71% of Bangladeshi youth believe that mob violence is now a regular part of public life, and 47% fear becoming a target of politically motivated attacks.

Unless urgent and systemic reforms are made, ranging from police restructuring and judicial independence to digital misinformation controls and civic education, mob justice may become a permanent feature of Bangladesh's political landscape.

The last year has shown that when institutions fail, mobs rise. The question facing Bangladesh now is whether it can reclaim the rule of law or whether the crowd, not the court, will continue to decide who lives and who dies.
